

What if my mistress

Thomas Morley

5

What if my mis- tress now will needs un- con- stant be? Wilt My mis- tress frowns, and swears that now I love her not; The
 She blames my truth and cause- less- ly ac- cus- eth me; I If she doth change, she must not be in con- stan- cy; For If she at once do please to fa- vour more than one, -
 But now let love in time re- dress all these my wrongs; And Which if I find, my heart some oth- er- where will dwell, For, thou be then so false in love as well as she? No, change she finds is that which my des- pair be- got, Des-must not let mine eyes re- port what they do see; My why she doth pro- fess to take such li- ber- ty; Her-I a- greed in hum- ble sort to make my moan; I let my love re- ceive the due to her be- longs, Else lov- ing, not to be be- lov'd, it is a hell. Since no, such false- hood flee, though wo- men faith- less be, No, pair which is my love, since she all faith for- got, Des-thoughts re- strain'd must be; and yet she will go free, My self she will un- tie, and yet fast bound am I, Herspake not to a stone, where sense of love is none, I thus I'll frame my song or change my mis- tress' longs, Else so my hap be- fell, I bid my love fare- well, Since no, such false- hood flee, though wo- men faith- less be.

10

 pair which is my love, since she all faith for- got.
 thoughts re- strain'd must be; and yet she will go free.
 self she will un- tie, and yet fast bound am I. spake not to a stone, where sense of love is none.
 thus I'll frame my song or change my mis- tress' longs.
 so my hap be- fell, I bid my love fare- well.