

5. Dost thou withdraw thy grace?

John Danyel

Dost, dost thou with- draw thy grace, dost, O dost thou with- draw thy grace be- cause I should not love, and think'st thou to re- move my af- fec-tions with thy face? As if yes, that 'tis more, more is no de- part, but desire there where thy beau- ty lies, and were not in far my heart greater than where it burns where it wounds and pines, as fire is in far more fire where it burns in thy fair eyes. than where it shines!

Ah
